Tip Sheet

- Here are few tips for providing telehealth in complex situations:
 - ✓ Follow all laws, regulations, and ethics to the extent that you are able.
 - ✓ Use best practices if at all possible.
 - ✓ Assess the safety of the location that your client is in. Ask questions such as:
 - Is this a good time to talk?
 - Who's home with you at the moment?
 - Is it safe for us to speak right now?
 - Are you in any danger?
 - If your spouse came home or entered the room, how would that affect you?
 - Is there anything that we shouldn't speak about while on this computer? Over the phone?
 - Who else has access to the electronics that you're using?
 - Would there be an issue if someone else used or had access to these electronics?
 - Are you able to delete the history or eliminate evidence that may remain on these electronics?
 - In the event that you become upset, who can comfort you? Is there anyone who would have a negative reaction to your emotions?
 - If you needed assistance, how would you get it?
 - How long would it take for assistance to reach you?
 - ✓ In the event that the location is not optimally secure, consider: Are other options available? Is it possible for your client to speak on the phone with you while in the car? Outside? And if you speak by phone, is the client able to wipe the history so that the call is not evident to anyone else?
